Briefcase bomb scare in Olsen

by Steven D. Morehouse
Connector Staff

Olsen Hall was evacuated Friday before Spring Break when a suspicious briefcase was discovered unattended on the third floor of the computer science building.

At approximately 2 p.m., a student reported a briefcase had been placed outside a storage room area by Olsen rooms 314 and 315. UML Police Sergeant Gagne and two other officers investigated the matter as classes continued.

"It was in an area that raised our hair just a little bit," said Gagne. "It was enough not to take any chances at all." After inspection, Gagne immediately contacted the Lowell City Police Department and UMass Lowell's Police Captain Reardon. After consulting with Reardon, Gagne gave the order to pull the fire alarm, but not before contacting the Lowell City Fire Department to inform them of the situation.

The Lowell Fire Department, the Lowell Police Department and the Brockton State Police Bomb Squad were dispatched to deal with what turned out to be a wayward briefcase.

The fire alarm was pulled to ensure the safety of those in the building as officials waited for the bomb squad to arrive. All the doors were locked by security officers to keep people from getting back inside with the exception of one door allowing authorities access.

The surrounding streets were blocked off when Lowell Police and Fire Departments arrived on the scene. During this time, the owner of the briefcase, a professor, approached the fire marshal inquiring about the proceedings. The professor realized the briefcase in question could have been his, and after describing what it looked like and where it might have been left, officials escorted him in to verify that it was, indeed his.

According to Gagne, the professor isn't in the habit of carrying his briefcase to his classes, but on that particular Friday, he

Two Rape Aggression Defense Systems students working towards empowerment while Officer Dawn Beauchesne spots. Fox Hall was the meeting place for the class intended to prevent rape by teaching women to use their bodies as a weapon.

Rape Aggression Defense Systems is one of the top women's self defense courses in the United States. In the Campus Law Enforcement Journal Lawrence N. Nadeau, executive director Rape Aggression Defense Systems, Inc., R.A.D. is "the fastest-growing and largest women's self-defense program in the country." It is the only self defense course approved of by the International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators.

At the first R.A.D. meeting awareness was discussed: awareness of how, according to Officer Tim Sheehan of the UMass Lowell Police Department, "men wake up, burp, stretch and get on with their day. Awareness of how women have to adopt a defensive posture for the day immediately following their waking up." There are no feministic view points, there are no political views introduced — just education.

Why educate only women? Because every 21 hours someone is raped on a college campus and one out of four women will be sexually assaulted in their lifetime. Because one in 12 college males admits to acts legally defined as rape. Because rape doesn't discriminate because of age or socio-economic back-

Another reason to attend hockey games...

The UMass Lowell Pep Band is a one credit, musical ensemble that plays at home hockey games. I had the opportunity to speak to one of the band's members; Steve Rheaume, a sophomore psychology major, about the band in general and his involvement in the group. His feeling about the group is that, "[we're] laid-back in pursuit of musical excellence."

Taking time out of its busy Wednesday rehearsal schedule for some publicity is the Pep Band.

How early do you have to report to Durgin Hall for a performance?

One and a half to two hours before performance time.

How many hours per week do you practice?

Wednesdays, 6:30 until 9:00 p.m. in the Durgin Concert Hall, plus personal rehearsal time.

What does it take to do a performance? Can't you just pick-up and go?

"It takes forever to set-up and break down." — Deb Huber

Load the truck with the microphone equipment, the drums and keyboard and cymbals, etc., drive to the Tsongas Arena, set-up mikes and drums, warm-up and do a sound check.

Where do you perform?

Home hockey games; "the audience listens for us during the breaks." —Rheaume

Recital hour in April, a Jazz festival in Reading; "this will be the first time the hockey band's performed outside a hockey game." —Huber

How many people are in the group?

19, plus Deb Huber and Brian Faulks who aren't students, so they aren't in the group for the credit, but they fill-in when needed.

Why are you a member of the band?

"It's a lot of fun. [The members of the band are] great people to hang around with. [There's a] good crowd [at the hockey games]. [The Pep Band is] a tight ensemble which plays challenging music."

How long has the Pep Band been in existence at UMass Lowell?

"A few years." — Huber

How did you get into the band?

Auditions are held in November. Perspective members prepare an audition piece, do some sight reading and do some improve.

Does everyone who auditions get in?

No, only the people who are beneficial to the ensemble get in. Dan [Lutz] doesn't let people in just to fill slots.

How long is the Pep Band's season?

Early December through April.

Who is the director? The assistant director?

Dan Lutz is the director and Deb Huber is the assistant director.

What kind of music do you play?

Everything from "In the Mood" to the Spice Girls.

Why do you learn so much music?

"[So there's] variety in what we play."

Writer's Note: Many bands only learn short "charts," or pieces written especially for encouraging the team, like "Born to be Wild and "Hit the Road Jack." The UMass Pep Band prepares longer selections, like "In the Mood," to play during breaks to make the game more interesting for them and the crowd.

Who is in the band?

James Powers — auxiliary percussion
Abe Finch — drums
Rob Keeler — guitar
Shawn Rosenberg — bass guitar
Tracy Martin — keyboard
Manish Shah — trombone
Chris O'Brien — trombone
Justin Mitnick — trombone
Mark Whittaker — trombone
Jeff Dennis — trombone
Steve Rheaume — trumpet
Eli Oake-Libow — trumpet
Jay Lazot — trumpet
Steve Furtardo — trumpet
Brian LaPorto — alto saxophone
Jennifer Kilpatrick — alto saxophone
Steve Dickey — tenor saxophone
Lauren Anno — baritone saxophone
Brian Faulks — whatever is needed
Deb Huber — whatever is needed

How often do you perform?

One hockey game per week.

Incidentally, the Boston Globe said that the UMass Lowell Pep Band is the "best hockey band in Hockey East."

University of Massachusetts-Amherst

AMHERST, MA — According to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, University of Massachusetts sophomore Andrew B. Sala, 19, of Mendon died March 10 after falling from a window in Cashin Residence Hall. Sala's body was found on the first-floor ledge of the hall at approximately 8:30 a.m. According to a press release issued by the University News office, UMass police were notified about the incident by a Resident Assistant and they immediately called the Amherst Fire department for an ambulance. According to the press release, "Ambulance personnel were unable to assist due to obvious signs of death." Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin stated authorities have no indication of how long Sala's body may have been there and added that Sala was in good academic standing and had recently made plans to change his major from chemical engineering to management. UMass and state police are working together to investigate the incident. No foul play is suspected.

Harvard University

CAMBRIDGE, MA — The Harvard Crimson reports Harvard junior David L. Okrent, a 20-year-old physics concentrator, was found stabbed March 15 on Revere Beach in Boston. Okrent was pronounced dead on arrival at Massachusetts General Hospital shortly after 6:30 a.m. According to the Suffolk County District Attorney's office, a man walking his dog found Okrent, who had a single stab wound to the neck. Officials said Okrent was still alive when authorities arrived on the scene. According to residents, Okrent had been present at the "Cabot Underground" dance and was last seen at 1:30 a.m. Okrent's death is being investigated by the Massachusetts State Police as a "possible homicide," said James M. Bourgesanie, press secretary for the Suffolk County district attorney's office. Bourgesanie did not rule out the possibility of suicide, saying Okrent's wound could have been self-inflicted.

Harvard University

CAMBRIDGE, MA — According to reports from the Harvard Crimson on March 18, state police investigators looking into the death of David L. Okrent now believe the physics concentrator took his own life early March 15. While police initially approached their investigation into Okrent's death as a "possible homicide," they now believe Okrent was alone on Revere Beach and consider suicide the most likely cause. Autopsy results are expected within the next two weeks—until then, the state police cannot officially close their investigation into the cause of Okrent's death. Investigators have also learned Okrent had spoken about ways he might kill himself and had attended counseling for depression. Lawrence Okrent, David Okrent's father, said his son had not adjusted to life at Harvard as well as he had hoped.

Harvard University

CAMBRIDGE, MA — According to the Harvard Crimson, 35-year-old master's degree candidate Frank P. Minore Jr. was found dead in his Boston apartment on the evening of March 18 in what Boston police spokesperson Margot Hill confirmed as an apparent suicide. State officials found four prescription drug vials and a bottle of liquor next to the body. Minore showed no vital signs upon discovery, and was pronounced dead at 9:23 p.m. Minore "had developed a lot of friendships," said Dominic J. Minore, the victim's brother. "He was very outgoing. He enjoyed life." Hill noted Minore was taken to Brigham and Women's Hospital on March 6 following a previous suicide attempt. No one told the University about the attempt. As a recipient of private health care insurance, Minore had the choice to inform others about his hospitalization.

University of New Hampshire

DURHAM, NH — The New Hampshire reports Neil Lubow, associate provost for academic affairs, died on March 11 after a skiing accident at Sunday River in Bethel, Maine. Maine State Police said Lubow was treated on the scene at approximately 3 p.m. by Sunday River emergency personnel. Lubow was then taken to Stevens Memorial Hospital in Norway, Maine where he died in surgery at approximately 6 p.m. Lubow, a Portsmouth resident, had been at UNH since 1980 where he served as interim associate vice president for academic affairs from 1987 to 1989 before being appointed permanently. From 1995 to 1996, he worked as interim vice president for finance and administration before returning to Academic Affairs as associate provost in 1997.

University of Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA, PA — According to the Daily Pennsylvanian, one person was killed and three others, including a University student, were wounded on March 1 in related on-campus shootings following the Philadelphia Public League high school boys basketball championship. Witnesses heard a series of gunshots shortly after the tournament ended. According to police, the incidents were the result of a drive-by shooting where a suspect inside a car fired an automatic or semi-automatic gun at least 15 times before fleeing. Several police officers at the scene said they suspect the shootings were related to a fist-fight between two fans inside the building during half-time. The Penn State student wounded in the shooting, senior John La Bombard, is being treated for a gunshot wound to his left leg and remained hospitalized in stable condition.

University of Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA, PA – The Daily Pennsylvanian reports a South Philadelphia man wanted by police in connection with the March 1 shooting leaving one man dead and three other people wounded turned himself in March 16, two days after Police issued a warrant for his arrest. Kyle McLemore, 21, surrendered himself at approximately 6:30 p.m. at the Center City office of his lawyer, Charles Peruto Jr.. McLemore has been charged with murder, three counts of aggravated assault and several related charges. Today a judge will determine whether the evidence homicide detectives have gathered is sufficient to uphold the charges. McLemore allegedly shot and killed Anthony Davis, 22, after the Philadelphia Public League high school basketball championships and allegedly shot and wounded Penn State senior John La Bombard, 22, who was hit by a stray bullet.

Pennsylvania State University

STATE COLLEGE, PA –According to the Daily Collegian, retired Professor Julian Heicklen was scheduled for a preliminary hearing on charges of marijuana possession on March 18. However, Heicklen left the courthouse incensed before his case could be heard, resulting in a warrant for his arrest. Heicklen felt he had waited long enough for his 1 p.m. hearing. After waiting twenty minutes, Heicklen left the courthouse complaining of a slow trial process, "when the judge finally arrived, he didn't apologize or introduce himself. The bottom line is I appeared and they didn't. The trial is over." The preliminary hearing was for charges filed after Heicklen's February 25 marijuana protest. In the past several weeks, Heicklen has held marijuana protests on College Avenue with the intent to nullify all marijuana laws.

Texas A&M University

COLLEGE STATION, TX — The Battalion reports Texas A&M University professor Dhiraj Pradhan said he received a death threat over the phone February 27, the day after he was indicted on two felony counts charging him with misusing between $1,500 and $20,000 of the University's money for two private businesses, Technology Transfer Institute and Reliable Computer Technology. Pradhan said he believes the death threat is a response to several quotes that ran in the Bryan-College Station Eagle where he claims the quotes were taken out of context from private faxes he had sent to his colleagues. Pradhan commented on the indictment, "they [the University] are wanting to indict me to get rid of me and to protect somebody in the chain of command."

ground. According to Officer Sheehan, "this course is intended to increase the women's aura of strength...to increase her level of empowerment. The course breaks socio-cultural boundaries, it makes women feel empowered." Nadeau says, "the R.A.D System was developed by a campus law enforcement officer, in an attempt to bridge the gap between common crime prevention lectures and basic martial arts technique. Combining both of these in a realistic, practical, and defensible format produced the R.A.D. System, a program that is consistent in quality and philosophy, regardless of instructor."

The participants learn a myriad of defenses, but the main goal of the course is to create options for personal defense. The class consists of between 12 and 20 hours of training on using a woman's natural personal weapons; the only people allowed in the course are women. The sole men allowed in the room during the class are instructors and, even at that, it is acknowledged that a woman might feel uncomfortable practicing the defense techniques with a male.

The class can be emotional for some. Survivors may come because they don't want to be a victim again. One woman was there for the second time because she had to use the techniques at a party and she wanted to brush-up because, in using them, she discovered she was rusty.

The R.A.D. program at UMass Lowell began three years ago with Captain Patricia Reardon writing a grant proposal to obtain the necessary equipment to launch the program, including a R.A.D. Aggression Suit and pads for kicking. The Office of Student Services has been a great supporter of the program; Carrie Fagner can be contacted for information on registration. There have been two R.A.D. classes during the 1997-98 school year with another scheduled for the Spring. The winter class closed with a simulation: a confrontation between a woman and Officer Sheehan dressed in the R.A.D. Aggression Suit. Every woman went up against the aggressor three times and had to successfully fight him off and run to the "safe zone" before she was allowed to leave the room.

The participants learn a myriad of defenses...

The five instructors of the last session were Michelle Chakarian, a resident advisor in Concordia; Sergeant DuPont of the UMLPD; Officer Vanessa Dixion of the Lowell PD; Officer Dawn Beauchesne of the Shirley PD; Officer Tim Sheehan of the UMLPD and Captain Patricia Reardon of the UMLPD. These people have all gone through the initial R.A.D. program and a training session for instructors.

The student's reactions to the program were inspiring, "a good course," and "it should be a must for women living in the dorms." "It's an empowering experience: emotionally, physically and mentally." "A total body experience."

The most popular question of the evening was, "are you okay?" and every response was a confident, "yes."

did. The professor placed his briefcase out of reach of sprinkler construction. Because he is not accustomed to carrying his briefcase, he accidentally left it behind. After verifying the briefcase, officials called off the bomb squad en route from the Brockton State Police Barracks. The bomb disposal squad presented the biggest concern for Gagne, "their response time is a little bit longer than usual because they are so far away." According to police reports, the whole ordeal lasted approximately 80 minutes.

water streaming down the walls soaking everything in its path. A heating pipe on the sixth floor had broken.

After frantically shoving anything of value out of harm's way, Sherman rushed down to the lobby to alert the security guard on duty, Dennis Shemchuk, of the situation.

Shemchuk immediately called plumbers to investigate what turned out to a burst pipe on the sixth floor.

After recruiting help from other members of the Connector staff, everything of value was splayed about the hallway leading to the office—until water began to creep into the hallway. The equipment was then moved into a storage room.

The total damage to the Connector office was held to a minimum. No computers were lost, but several ceiling tiles had to be replaced, the rug had to be cleaned and drywall needs replacing in several areas.

OPINIONS AND LETTERS

The struggles of newsprint

by Andrew Sherman

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Over spring break five members of the Connector staff attended a college media convention in New York City. College newspapers from across the nation attended the conference. There was a large diversity of problems and financial structuring of papers. The most prevalent problem was the censoring of college newspapers. Editors of both public and private colleges spoke of their papers being pulled from the bins, of the presses being halted and of funding being revoked.

Many of these editors can share the blame when their papers are censored. They were not vigilant in protecting their newspapers' First Amendment rights. They allowed minor comments and suggestions about what should be written in the paper go unchecked. At a state funded university the administration may not dictate guidelines for publication in a student newspaper. The courts have given clear guidelines as to what constitutes an abridgment of a college newspaper's First Amendment rights.

There is the direct censoring of the newspaper, which requires a member of the administration to read all materials before they are printed, to insure a subtle content. Taking all the papers, or large numbers of papers from the bins prevents students from obtaining the paper. A more indirect form of censorship is the revoking of funding, or the denial of funding, for reasons of content.

At a state college the administration and students who are responsible for the distribution of funds (Student Government Association and finance committees) may not control the content of college newspapers, even though the paper is a part of the university. It's that simple. We at the Connector are vigilant in defending our First Amendment rights. It is our obligation to provide a censor free paper, and we will continue to do so.

Many college newspaper editors receive compensation for their work on the paper in the form of college credit, a small salary, or a significant discount in tuition. For the Connector staff their is no compensation for working on the paper. The editors and advisors with whom I talked to were amazed at the quality of paper when they took into account the editors were not compensated for their work.

Frequently, student papers in which the editors are not compensated for their work, have an advisor, who basically runs the paper. We do not have such an advisor, and I am thankful for this. Such an advisor is fearful of controversial content, fearful of losing his job, and will steer the students away from controversial topics. Our advisor, Professor Kachur, takes a hands off approach. I talk to him when I need his advice, or I fax him a story I would like his opinion on. He does not try to dominate the paper, after all it is a student paper not a faculty paper.

We at the Connector will continue to try as hard as we can despite our academic obligations and jobs. It may appear as if I am making excuses, but I am not. The errors in our paper, and stories we miss, anger me more then anyone else. I'm the editor in chief, I don't

Bulger and Hogan — slum lords

by Andrew Sherman

For the second time in two years, the Connector office was flooded. I can't describe what it was like to see everything you have worked for almost disappear.

It was a matter of luck that I found the leak. If I didn't have to change a tire on my car, I would have been able to leave on time. The flood would have gone unnoticed until water was flowing down the stairwells and elevator shafts. By then, the Connector office would have been destroyed. We would have to replace seventy thousand dollars worth of computer equipment. The loss in advertising revenue would have been crippling. Our paper is largely funded by advertising, we would have had to ask for additional funding to cover the lost ad revenue.

> "The flooding of our office highlights a serious problem."

The flooding of our office highlights a serious problem. The condition of Fox Hall is deplorable, as is that of Leitch and Bourgeois Hall. The President of the UMass system, William Bulger, has recently moved into a one-million dollar a year office facility. How is it that this kind of money can be found for the president's office, and not for the dormitories. A bond issue to make improvements to dormitories is being delayed. If this money was to improve Bulger's office, I doubt it would be delayed. Yet, when it's for the students, the reason Bulger and every other employee is here, the money is delayed. Students languish in asbestos filled rat holes, while Bulger's office overlooks the State House. How can the expense of Bulger's office be justified when the dorms are in such a deplorable state.

We, the students, are customers and we are not satisfied with our product. Every time a pipe breaks, or the elevators break, or the heaters shut off and rain seeps through a closed window, we be come less satisfied. Would Bulger tolerate such conditions in his office, I doubt it, but the students have to.

As for the plans for the new student center — they should be put on hold until the dorms are fixed. A complete repair, not the Band-Aid repair they've undergone in the last couple of years. How can the student center be justified, when the dorms are languishing in disrepair. A student center of this scale would attract more students, but adequate dorms would better serve to keep them. Chancellor Hogan's grand plain for UMass Lowell is over extending itself. We should repair what we already have before we move onto more ambitious project.

The consequences of us

Aaron has worked at the same bookstore for the past two years now. On this particular not-so-sunny Sunday he's almost having a good time serving people's never-ending need for literature they neither know the title nor authors of. He's having a good day...doesn't happen often. A family of three consisting of mother, father and their young son shuffle aimlessly towards the counter to check out. Its 10:30 in the morning, Aaron's managed to keep in good humors so far. Not much can ruin his day when break looms only thirty minutes away.

Three items plop in front of him by a mother who seems to have had a long life in her thirty years. Judging the items, Aaron senses someone's going to celebrate a young friend's birthday today. As he waits for his mother, the son begins to fiddle with the all-too-expensive bookmarks displayed behind them. The mother stands patiently in front of Aaron telling her son to stop messing with the merchandise—seemingly throwing the words over her shoulder. It isn't long before the father (Aaron presumes he's the father) takes charge of the situation. After repeating the mother's demand the father eases nonchalantly towards the son to pick him up.

"I don't think you realize how fragile your fingers are."

Aaron's ears pick up—every subconscious alarm is set off by the words sung dryly by the six foot tall man bearing over the boy. Aaron tries to watch the scene behind the mother through curt glances at the her, the register and the birthday presents. Maybe he didn't mean... Aaron thinks to himself as he bags the merchandise. The mother's caught him staring as the father drags the young boy out of the store, where's his left hand-where's his left—

"Someone needs a nap," the mother comments as she puts her wallet back into her purse. Suddenly Aaron hears a bang as the man carries his son through the double doors leading outside. A cry rings out. Aaron realizes the kid's literally being dragged out of the store. The mother only looks up once more to give a parting glance as if everything was all right with the world. If there had been another customer after them, he would have been ignoring them.

In his mind's eye, Aaron sees the future. He begins to understand a great deal more about what we call humanity, "they didn't even know..." Neither will the boy when the time comes.

Tarot cards predict plummeting stocks

by The Caring Psychic Student Advisor (Michael Carmody)

Gentle Readers,

As you know the topic of psychic financial counseling is a touchy one, and one that has fallen out of the popular press in recent years. In the past, most psychics that could predict "luck numbers" took a vow of poverty, feeling it was unfair to simply cash in on their psychic abilities to call up the correct series of numbers being drawn on a particular lottery drawing. Real psychics have tried to lay low, seldom winning the multi-millions of bucks every week, the jackpots will go down and they'll probably stop having drawings, because they'll think the drawings are fixed. What we usually do is just win every once in a while (and act really surprised), or give the winning numbers to a friend, and then split the winnings. So, having psychic abilities isn't all good, as you can see. We're constantly being hounded by people who want us to make them rich by giving them the winning lottery numbers in advance. I was reminded of this dilemma when I received this letter from a concerned investor-

Dear Caring Psychic Student Advisor,

Before I came to UMass, I worked for this company that had a 401K plan. Now I'm getting ready to roll it over into either an IRA or some kind of mutual fund. Which way do you think I should go?

-Perplexed

Dear Perplexed,

Well, I didn't think at first that I could give you real financial advice, because I've made all my money from Keno, so I asked one of my psychic friends (no, no the one on the phone) to loan me his Tarot cards that he uses for the stock market. So, I shuffled the cards and I started by asking what the stock market was going to do in the next few days. Well, I turned cards over, shuffled and turned them over again, and every time I turned the cards over, the first card up was the death card. I called my friend to ask him what this meant. "Was this just one of those transition things, you know like they say 'death is just transition to another state of being and so on'"? "No," he says, "death means the stock is going down like the "Titanic" and you better bail out or you'll wind up Leonardo DiCaprio." He asked me how many times the death card came up, and when I told him four times, he said "The markets gong to go down 600 points for four days straight." So, this is my advice to you "Perplexed" — take out all your money, pay the penalty, and stuff it under your mattress. Then, this Saturday, play these numbers : 4, 16, 19, 23, 27, 31.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mental work doesn't go as well as anticipated. Also, judgment is off this week when it comes to spending on matters of pleasure. You uncharacteristically splurge for some reason.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It will be difficult this week to convince family members of the merit of a business project you're pursuing. Try not to skim the surface. Be thorough and follow through on all details.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Even if principle is involved, remember that sometimes others simply forget what is expected of them. Small problems arise later in the week with friends. These are easily cleared up by the weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid friction with higher-ups as the week begins. Projects around the house keep you busy. It's not a good idea this weekend to get financially involved with a friend's investment scheme.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although the social sector of your life is happily emphasized, you experience rivalry in romance or let jealous feelings come to the fore. Negativity is never becoming and doesn't serve you well in the long run.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) New ideas have you anxious to get started, but impatience could cause trouble with those around you. Still, you will get ahead. A weekend social outing proves fascinating.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Charm and persuasiveness serve you well this week. Still, in dealings with higher-ups, you have to gauge the situation carefully. Behavior must be appropriate.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You could be a bit hard on one friend, though there's a tendency to keep up with some of your high-stepping friends. You can't have it both ways. Make the more conservative choice and stick to a safer routine.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) After holding yourself in check for part of the week, there's a tendency to trip the light fantastic. However, you could spend a bit more than you'd anticipated. Take steps to correct this in order to avoid future problems.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Artistic types contact the muse and vent their feelings. Enjoy the company of friends in social settings. This weekend, romance sets the pace as you could be swept off your feet.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Behind-the-scenes moves are favored regarding business and finances. Once you get the work out of the way, you feel a charge of creative energy. Let your hair down and socialize this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Important work gains come early in the week. Later, creative interests dominate and stir your intellect. Although social life is a plus over the weekend, you'll also want some time just for yourself and pet projects.

'The Man in the Iron Mask' --- not quite 'Braveheart'

by Steven D. Morehouse

"The Man in the Iron Mask"
[PG-13]
Running time: 117 minutes
Starring: Leonardo DiCaprio, Jeremy Irons, John Malkovich, Gerard Depardieu, Gabriel Byrne, Anne Parillaud, Judith Godreche
Grade: B/C

"The Man in the Iron Mask" is loosely based (shudder) on the Alexandre Dumas novel illustrating a return appearance of the Three Musketeers. They come out of retirement in a plot to rescue France from the tyranny of the young, spoiled king. Louis XIV and his brother are played by Leonardo DiCaprio in a dual role, his first appearance since "Titanic." He looks well-fed as the oppressive ruler and not particularly scrawny as the man in the mask, but I'll rack that up to suspension of disbelief. As the film begins, he presides over a court that lives in luxury, while mobs riot for bread in the streets.

The beautiful Christine (Judith Godreche) catches his fancy, and since she's engaged to the young Raoul (Peter Sarsgaard), the king sends Raoul off to war and makes sure he gets killed ...so much for the boorish cliché boyfriend.

The death of Raoul enrages his father, Athos (John Malkovich), one of the original Musketeers, who enlists his comrades, Aramis (Jeremy Irons) and Porthos (Gerard Depardieu), in a plan for revenge...do two clichés make a right? Also involved is the original fourth musketeer, D'Artagnan (Gabriel Byrne), who remains loyal to Louis XIV and the twins' mother, Queen Anne (Anne Parillaud).

This set-up, easy enough to explain, takes director Randall Wallace too long to establish, and there are side plots, such as the king's war against the Jesuits, that may confuse the audience.

There was once a time when everyone had heard of the Musketeers and the Man in the Iron Mask, but history these days seems to start with the invention of MTV and South Park, and for those not familiar with the characters, it will take some time to get oriented.

The screenplay by Wallace (author of "Braveheart") is not well-focused, and there are unnecessary scenes, but finally we understand the basic theme: the Musketeers will spring on the Man in the Iron Mask and secretly substitute him for his brother. Ta-dah. The actual mechanics of their plan left me waiting for Mel Brooks to pop out of a corner. Does anyone think Jeremy Irons is big enough to smuggle Leonardo DiCaprio past suspicious guards under his cloak? "Are you happy to see me, or is that a DiCaprio under there?"

Wallace should have thought the plan through a tad. Unfortunately, the movie limits itself to the action in the plot—escapes, sword fights, the frequent chant "all for one and one for all," and ignores an opportunity to have more fun with the notion of a prisoner suddenly finding himself king.

Leonardo DiCaprio is somehow the star of the story without being its hero, although his first appearance from the mask is an effective shot. The Musketeers are cast with big names, but I was pleasantly surprised by Gabriel Byrne's performance. He has the most charisma and is the most convincing in his role. His scenes with Parillaud (from "La Femme Nikita") are some of the best in the movie.

Once all the pieces of the plot were in place, I was somewhat interested, if not overwhelmed. Possibly with a rewrite and better attention to character development, this could be a grade "A," "Braveheart" quality film instead of basically just a costume grade B/C swashbuckler. Maybe if Mel (Gibson—not Brooks) had directed...

Shades of Queen reflected in Spacehog's latest

The Spacehogs. Clockwise from bottom: Antony langdon, Richard Steel, Jonny Cragg and Royston Langdon.

Nevertheless, with better writing and a more focused production, this latest album is a more relaxed and confident endeavor, which is not to say Spacehog has begun taking themselves seriously…yet. Even at its most hysterical, as in the Broadway-laced "Lucy's Shoe" or the Middle Eastern-flavored "Beautiful Girl," Spacehog brings a sense of tongue planted firmly in cheek.

Every arrangement on this album is countered by at least a couple of straight-up rockers. For instance, despite an Opera House intro. and Brian May-like lead guitar break, "Goodbye Violet Race" stands out for its slap-happy chorus. Similarly, "Carry On" and "Mungo City" borrow Queen's musical gist with infectious vocal melodies to create simple songs that, surprisingly, stand up to repeated listenings.

> Every arrangement on this album is countered by at least a couple of straight-up rockers.

The reason I'm not ripping Spacehog apart for sounding too much like Queen is because the pleasures yielded by "The Chinese Album" lie in Spacehog's willingness to laugh at themselves as they spiral headlong into their (occasionally) Queen-esque ambitions.

Perhaps the group's philosophy, which seems to be that lavishness can fill in where talent falls short, is what persuaded Michael Stipe to contribute lead vocals in "Almond Kisses."

Confronted with a choice between technical achievement and joyous amateurism, most folks will jump at the latter every time, which is why I'm going to give "The Chinese Album" a B/C.

'LIVE FROM LETTERMAN'

David Letterman whispers sweet nothings into the ear of his dog.

by Andrew Sherman
Connector Staff

Most compilation albums follow a standard format; they use two or three established acts and sandwich them in-between the floor sweeping of the music industry. "Live on Letterman" is a refreshing break from this pattern.

The album features talented performers from several generations of rock music such as Aretha Franklin, Lou Reed and Jewel.

> The performances contain real musical oddities...

"Live from Letterman" is not simply a studio performance with applause interwoven. The performances contain real musical oddities which will fatten an music collection. Such as Jewel performing You Were Meant for Me, with Flea playing bass. Van Morrison, Sinead O' Conner and the Chieftians team up to perform a powerful version of Have I Told you Lately That I Love You.

Although the album is generally well-put together, there are noticeable low points in it. Such an example is Elvis Costello and Burt Bacharach performing God Give Me Strength, a performance which makes one long for the sweet melody of elevator music. The Lyle Lovett and Al Green combination is questionable addition to the compilation and wastes space better used by (fill in the blank).

Credit has to be given to Sheila Rogers, the producer of the album. She avoided the pit fall of throwing every band of the minute onto the compilation, such as Hanson and the Spice girls, a very scary thought.

With the ever increasing price of CDs, "Live on Letterman" is a wise investment. It is guaranteed to have a staying power in your CD collection.

University of Colorado

BOULDER, CO – The Colorado Daily reports Michael Sykes, a CU athletic official, was arrested on theft charges March 16 for reportedly turning in fraudulent receipts in exchange for cash. Sykes, the travel coordinator for the men's basketball team, admitted to CU police in both taped and written confessions that he had altered receipts indicating more money than he actually spent and turned them into the athletic business office. According to CU police, in three transactions over a two-month period, Sykes gained $1,342.07. Sykes told police he did these things because he needed money. CU spokeswoman Pauline Hale said Sykes was confronted by the Department of Internal Audit on February 20 about the suspicious charges where he admitted to altering the receipts. Sykes resigned from his job and has been "very cooperative" with the investigation, Hale said.

University of California-Berkeley

BERKELEY, CA — The Daily Californian reports Randy Baadhio, a former visiting professor at the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, was arrested March 11 for his alleged role in a credit card scam that cheated university faculty. Randy Baadhio, 32, obtained a number of faculty credit cards under false pretenses, and in an elaborate scheme, cheated banks and credit card companies of nearly $200,000 over a two-year period, according to UC police. Baadhio was charged with 26 counts of forgery, grand theft and check fraud. He is currently held in Santa Rita Jail in Dublin on $140,000 bail. If convicted, Baadhio could face up to seven years in a state penitentiary.

University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, MI – According to the Michigan Daily, more than 500 students fought their way into the Michigan League on March 18 to hear anti-affirmative action leader Ward Connerly speak. The evening turned into a heated debate between Connerly and the audience. Connerly, who served on the University of California Board of Regents when it voted to end its use of affirmative action said, "we want to abolish those programs that treat people differently." When the dialogue began, audience members questioned Connerly's role as a black leader who has "sold out his own people." Connerly said he does not view himself as "a black man, but as an American." State Senator David Jaye was disappointed the crowd did not allow Connerly to speak, adding that audience members who do not support affirmative action should have been allowed to speak.

University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, MI — The Michigan Daily reports business junior Corey Fryling found hate signs on his door, a garbage can full of water spilled into his room and an indirect death threat while living at Mary Markley Residence Hall last year. He said these incidents were malicious hate crimes stemming from his membership in the University's gay community. The Triangle Foundation, a national gay rights group, reported a 34-percent increase last year in hate crimes against the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities on college campuses. "Misinformation abounds on this campus about gays and lesbians," said University Affirmative Action Representative Jim Toy. "There are 5,000 entering students every year and they bring their prejúdices with them."

Boston University

BOSTON, MA – The Daily Free Press reported on March 18 that Bill Cosby has joined an all-star cast in an attempt to sell the University of Massachusetts to prospective students. Two 30-second commercials, which began a seven-week run in Boston, Springfield and Providence, are hitting the air at a time when most high school seniors decide on a college. Cosby, who earned both a master's degree and doctorate from UMass, asks, "who goes to the University of Massachusetts?" Basketball Hall of Famer Julius "Dr. J." Erving answers, "I fell in love with the campus immediately upon seeing it." Boston Celtic coach Rick Pitino, also a UMass graduate, claims the decision to go to UMass is a "no-brainer." Other famous alumni appearing in the commercials include John Smith, the chairman and CEO of General Motors, and astronaut Catherine Coleman.

University of Arizona

TUCSON, AZ — According to the Arizona Daily Wildcat, UA President Peter Likins told the ASUA Senate on March 12 that he appreciates student opinion about a pending contract with Nike, but said its a financial "drop in the bucket" compared with other corporate contracts. Addressing a crowd of approximately 40 people in the Memorial Student Union Tucson Room along with the Associated Students Senate, spectators and senators questioned Likins about allegations of Nike labor violations and how the university's contract will impact Nike's labor practices. Monica Wilson, a Students Against Sweatshops spokesperson, said in spite of a code of conduct existing since 1992, Nike continues to commit labor violations. "There will continue to be abuses—you can put that in the bank," Likins said. "Nike will never be perfect."

University of Texas-Austin

AUSTIN, TX — The Daily Texan reports that after plummeting in the U.S. News and World Report rankings released this month, the UT School of Law is seeking former students to improve its employment statistics. Law school officials held a symposium February 26 to discredit the drop from 18 to 29 in this year's ranking. About 50 students attended. U.S. News and World Report attributed the drop to the law school's failure to track students' employment status after graduation where they reported the status of 61 former students was unknown. Of those, the magazine classified 75 percent as unemployed. Brian Leiter, a UT professor of law who plans on debunking the numbers commented, "we are taking a whole series of aggressive steps to counteract this outrageous treatment from U.S. News."

Today my neighbors assasinated a slug with salt. It shriveled up. I found the evidence on our doorstep when I came back from my walk.

People don't care about slugs the way they care about moneys. Monkeys sort of look like little kids.

I think it's the same with people's race. The more they look like us and sound like us the more we think they have feelings.

I'm gonna bury the slug in a real slug grave and say a little slug prayer.

I'll do all the burial preparations pretty slowly.... you know... out of respect.

Recreational Sports is pleased to announce a new program which will arrive at UMass Lowell on Monday: the Aquafina/ Diet Pepsi Training and Fitness Challenge.

This program is designed to give athletes, recreational exercisers and beginners the opportunity to try new activities and receive product samples and free prizes. During the first two weeks of April, Rec. Sports staff will be around campus conducting a variety of activities such as spontaneous fitness competitions, lectures and group exercise classes.

Students, faculty and staff are encouraged to participate in all events and register for the NIKE Swoosh Challenge Regional Championship.

Most of the fitness competitions and events will take place at Costello Gymnasium on North Campus. The events include relay races, an obstacle course, a weight lifting competition and a Stairmaster competition. Make sure that you keep an eye out for the schedule of events for the program.

This is a great opportunity for those of you who like to compete to show your stuff! If you have been thinking about summertime and getting back into shape, make sure that you take advantage of this promotion. Where else can you start to get fit and get free stuff?

Women's ice hockey makes history

by Chrissy Brouillard,
Connector Contributor

The first UMass Lowell women's hockey team to grace the ice of Tully Forum. The team competed in a tournament at Harvard University several weekends ago.

The UMass Lowell women's ice hockey team made history March 7 and 8 when it participated in its first tournament in its history: the McArthur Cup tournament held at Harvard University.

The team opened the tournament with its first win. The win was against MIT: 5 to 3.

Freshman Shaundra Rubchinuk scored the first goal in UMass Lowell women's hockey history with a blazing slapshot from the point. Sophomore sharpshooter Stacey Huntoon scored a pair of goals for the cause and seniors Denise Berry and Julie Russell each scored their first ice hockey goals.

In the second game, UMass Lowell rode Harvard to a 3 to 1 win with the help of three goals from the three teammates from the Chelmsford Girls Hockey Association. Sophomore co-captain Chrissy Brouillard scored her goal from virtually behind the net, banking her shot of the back of the goalie's pad while fellow co-captain Stacey Huntoon found the netting of the top left corner just right. Speedster defenseman Pamela McNeil wheeled into the zone and scored the insurance goal for the Hawks.

These wins propelled the team into its first final.

In the final, the team lost in a double shoot-out against MIT, but still exceeded expectations. Sophomore Pamela McNeil and senior Denise Berry each score a goal in the valiant effort.

If you are interested in joining the team, or for more information, call Chrissy at x5403.

Emotional victory over New Hampshire

Martin Fillion prevented UNH from tilting the scales in its favor which enabled UMass to triumph 3 to 0.

An emotional and stellar night for seniors as they blank New Hampshire 3 to 0.

Before the game, seniors Mike Nicholishen, Chris Libett, Shannon Basaraba and Martin Fillion were honored for their excellent play over the years at UMass Lowell.

These seniors deserve a lot of credit for always stepping up when needed to lead the River Hawks to victory. These seniors will be remembered for years to come as one of the best senior classes at UMass Lowell .

Then it was game time and the seniors stepped up to the challenge to lead the team to victory. The game became a very physical and one sided game in favor of UMass Lowell.

First period had one goal, scored by Greg Koehler, and saw UMass Lowell kill a five minute penalty in the period. During the second period, UMass Lowell would continue to put the pressure on New Hampshire with Brad Rooney and Doug Nolan scoring, making it a 3 to 0 game.

Martin Fillion, a star who shined brightly that night, stopped 21 shots to lead UMass Lowell to a shut-out.

New Hampshire could not get any momentum in the game which led to their loss.

Health & Nutrition
by Judith Sheldon

IS OLIVE OIL the only oil to use? There is some confusion about the types of cooking oils one should or should not use to help reduce cholesterol levels in the blood. In an article in the June 1997 issue of the University of Texas Lifetime Health Letter, the writer notes that cholesterol travels in the blood stream as particles called lipoproteins, made up of fat and protein. High levels of the low-density lipoprotein (LDL, often called the bad cholesterol, and with good reason) increase the risk of heart problems. High levels of high-density lipoprotein or HDL (the good cholesterol) appear to reduce the risk of heart disease. Researchers have concluded that polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fats could both lower cholesterol. However, the polyunsaturated fats reduced both the LDL (bad) and HDL (good) cholesterol, while the monounsaturated fats reduced only the bad LDL fraction, which makes it the good or better fat choice. At present, most researchers agree both olive oil and canola oil appear to be the best oils for reducing heart problems. But using either of these oils won't help unless one also lowers the intake of saturated fats which are not only found in animal products, but also in palm and coconut oils, as well as in hydrogenated (hardened) oils used in margarines and shortening

With Easter and Passover coming up, use cans of fat-free broth thickened with cornstarch and low-fat milk to make your gravies for those traditional holiday roasts. (For kosher gravies where dairy products can't be used with meat, trying using soy milk instead.) Also, if you love cheesecake (and who doesn't?) you may find some good results using non-fat cream cheese instead of the regular cream cheese. While the non-fat product is often too dry to use as a spread, it can be used in baking. But be aware that if you're watching your salt intake, non-fat cream cheese has a higher sodium count than regular cream cheese. Use low-fat — not non-fat — margarine for the cake crust. (Non-fat margarine doesn't work too well for baking and frying.)

Winter Haven, Florida — Before I get to the upcoming Subway Series, (yes that's what I'm predicting) between the New York Mets and New York Yankees, we will first speak with the players and managers. Don't forget, you might laugh, but last season, I predicted the Florida Marlins would become the first-ever wild-card team to win a World Series.

LET'S TALK — Buck Showalter, former New York Yankee manager, just might become the first manager to win a pennant with an expansion team. Question, though, was, how about those pinstripes — changing from the Yankees to the Diamondbacks?

"No, that had already been decided when I got hired. But the hats, I'm hoping we're going to use the solid purple ones most of the time. I hate the white ones, but Jerry Colangelo likes 'em, so I guess they're gonna stay."

While I think the Diamondbacks can contend, Buck is always cagey. "I've always said the best managing is winning with a team that wasn't supposed to win, and repeating."

As for the Yankees, "I'll never apologize for being a fan of the Yankees. I'm not going to black it out. I'm proud of the time I spent there." This man is a class act!

The Brew Crew has joined the National League Central Division. Phil Garner has fast become one of the most respected managers in baseball working with a cost-cutting club. However, this move might make the up-and-coming Brewers potential contenders.

"The running style of play we started here in 1992 was instituted because that was the only way we could compete. Had I had 3-4-5 hitters who could hit more homers, you'd have seen me playing for the big inning. But I haven't had that. The fact is, the American League didn't know how to defend against the running game so we made use of what we had. Let's face it, speed is cheaper!"

Without a doubt, Phil and his crew will be rattling a lot of National League unsuspecting teams in 1998.

THIS IS NOT KANSAS — Former New York Met Tim Bogar (now with the Houston Astros in Kissimmee, Fla.) and his pregnant wife, Wendy, were the victims of the vicious tornadoes that hit Central Florida this early spring. Reveals Tim, "I had never been in one before and I don't ever want to be in another one again. It was like something you'd see on CNN. It's amazing what one of those things can do." The Bogars are fine, but Tim's car was smashed into a pickup truck.

My favorite player, Carlos Baerga, of the New York Mets states, "We have a winning atmosphere here. We're not afraid of anybody after last year."

Dwight Gooden who is donning a non-New York uniform for the first time in his career, believes he can be the Roger Clemens of 1997. Can you win 20 games this year, Diwght? "Sure, I think so. How about 21 or 22?!"
